

Gen. MacArthur Is Due to Fly To Japan Today

Okuma and Okuma's son, the guard of the airplane troops who will accompany him climb into their transports on Okuma's ship.

Nearly 1,000 miles to the southeast, Admiral Nimitz landed the green waters by Tokyo Bay at Yokosuka in a Coronado seaplane escorted by fighters.

The Commander of the U.S. Pacific Fleet immediately left the battleship South Dakota, which will serve as his flagship, he will represent the emperor, the United States at Japan's formal surrender aboard the battleship Missouri next Sunday.

General MacArthur will sign the document at the Supreme Allied Headquarters in Tokyo Bay with scores of other Allied warships, transports and bombers today in preparation for tomorrow's landing.

INVITES FREED CHIEFS

General MacArthur left Manila after inviting Lt. Gen. Joseph Wainwright, his successor on Batan and Corregidor in the dark days of 1942, to be his guest at the surrender ceremony aboard the Missouri.

Admiral William F. Halsey brought the Missouri, his flagship into Tokyo Bay with scores of other Allied warships, transports and bombers today in preparation for tomorrow's landing.

TO BOARD NAGATO

Fifteen minutes after a marine battalion takes over a marine battalion takes over the approaches to Yokosuka naval base and the crew of the American battleship Nagato will board the Japanese battleship Nagato just outside the base at 3:30 p.m. today, EDT.

Though the Nagato is half-sunk, her 18-inch guns still may be usable and represent a potential menace, Badger said.

Only after the Nagato and the three islands have been completely explored, the fleet enter the Yokosuka base, he explained.

"The Japanese are exhibiting a co-operative spirit," he said. "They have obeyed our orders and submitted to them so far. However, we are not modifying in any way our intent to land and disarm them."

REMAIN ON DUTY

He said 300 Japanese officers and 1,000 enlisted men and workmen will remain on duty until the Allies take over.

Badger said his flagship would enter the base and set at 7:30 p.m. today, EDT, under the command of the fleet.

Other seaborne infantry will land on the shores of Sagami Bay only a few miles south of Atsugi. Plans for the seaborne landing call for the first waves of airborne troops to clear a specified area around the airfield in preparation for the arrival of General MacArthur and his staff about midnight tonight, EDT.

LIKELY HEADQUARTERS

General MacArthur probably will set up temporary headquarters on the island of Iwo Jima, which is occupied by a Japanese suicide unit. Later he will move to the Hayama-Saiki area, south of Atsugi and east of Kamuro Hiroshi's summer palace.

Since only 200 to 250 transports a day can land at Atsugi, the initial occupation troops will clear the Tokyo area. Once sufficient strength has been built up, however, the troops will move into the city and the Japanese will establish permanent headquarters there.

Thousands of carrier and land-based planes will fly overhead on the watch for any Japanese treachery. Guns of warships will be trained on the enemy ships and the occupation troops will be armed—just in case.

EVACUATE PRISONERS

Order of evacuation in both the air and sea landings will be the evacuation of Allied war prisoners and civilian internees. Plans will take some prisoners to Okinawa for immediate medical treatment. Others will be loaded as rapidly as possible aboard the Japanese ships which will sail as soon as they are able.

Meanwhile, General MacArthur's headquarters in Manila announced that all Japanese forces on Moroto and Halmahera islands in the Dutch East Indies surrendered last Monday and now were being disarmed.

BRITISH SHIPS ALONG

The Albatross was followed by a line of other warships including the HMS Duke of York, commander in chief of the British Pacific Fleet, and the HMS Queen Elizabeth, Admiral Sir Bruce Fraser.

High Officers Pearl Harbor Are Criticized restful, however, that neither Stark nor Kimmel ever again should "hold any position in the U.S. navy which requires the exercise of superior judgment."

Both Stark and Kimmel are on the retired list, although Stark until recently served as commander of U.S. naval forces in Europe.

Secretary Stimson repeated earlier finding that Stark had made critical judgment which had determined his relief from command Stark also has gone into retirement and apparently will stay in that status.

CRITICIZE MARSHALL

The army board strongly criticized Marshall on four counts, for alleged failure to keep Stark "fully advised" of their danger that Japan might attack.

Stimson declared that this criticism was not justified. He said it was based on a misapprehension of the staff chief's function.

"It is not the function of the chief of staff," he said, "to specify to any and every subordinate the execution in detail of the duties of the various sections of the general staff."

"His paramount duty is to advise the President and the secretary of war, and to make plans for and supervise the organization, equipment, and training of a great army for global war."

TRUMAN STATEMENT

In a brief statement of his own, the President said:

"The conclusion of the secretary of war that General Marshall acted through out this matter with the usual 'great skill, energy and efficiency' is a tribute to his high character."

The army board also criticized Cordell Hull, who was secretary of war, for his failure to inform Stark of their attack and his failure to negotiate with Japanese "peace" terms.

The army report said Hull might have conducted the negotiations in a different manner and order to prolong them until the army and navy were better prepared for hostilities.

In reply to that, Stimson, himself a former secretary of state, stated that a different manner of proceeding would have been best only to a conjecture, but I feel that the board's criticism in this respect was uncalled for and not within the scope of their proper inquiry."

LACKED JUDGMENT

Navy authorities found that Stark and Kimmel did not do the necessary things to prevent such a defeat as occurred and that they failed to demonstrate superior judgment.

Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the U.S. fleet, repeated that Stark as chief of naval operations immediately after Pearl Harbor, said in an endorsement to the navy board's report that:

"The derelictions on the part of Admiral Stark and Admiral Kimmel were faults of omission and not of commission."

"In the case of question, they indicate lack of the superior judgment and command commensurate with their rank and their assigned duties, rather than culpable negligence."

MARSHALL CHARGES

The army board's charges against Marshall, to which Stimson and Truman objected, were that he "failed in his relations" with the Hawaiian department on four counts.

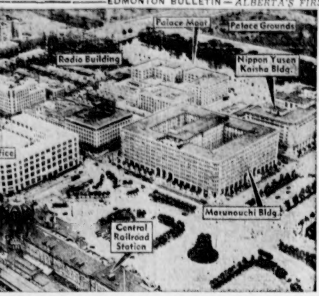

1. He failed to keep Stark "fully advised" of the growing tension of hostilities, lay across Maui peninsula in Sagami Bay or stood off in the Pacific ocean outside the Japanese islands, and to send their swarms of carrier planes to cover the point landings.

the consequences of such a weapon of war, if human common sense becomes resigned to it, I would not like to prophesy the future."

General Gaule spoke freely on conditions in France. Since liberation he said, the production of coal which had been reduced to one-quarter of pre-war output has risen now to about three-quarters.

French railways, cut to pieces in the fighting, had been restored to working condition but 15,000 locomotives France had before the war, only 2,000 remained in good order at liberation but the number had subsequently been repaired to about 7,000.

France, reduced to all at liberation, had now been restored to approximately one-half.

France expected this year to be able to import about a million tons of goods, mostly food, a large share of which would come from Canada.

What France required most was a new constitution or to re-organize the old system of a Chamber of Deputies and a Senate under the constitution of 1875. He favored a new constitution to avoid the present political situation.

INTERNAL QUESTIONS

The French leader gave some time to a brief review of the questions before the French people in the coming election—to choose between a new constitution or to re-organize the old system of a Chamber of Deputies and a Senate under the constitution of 1875.

He favored a new constitution to avoid the present political situation. He said the people would have to decide whether the present provisional government would continue to act in the interim.

NEIGHBORLY OFFICERS

Short said failed to replace inefficient staff officers in his command, the army board report.

The army board report contained much in defense of Short. Just prior to Pearl Harbor, the board, there seemed to have been a conviction in the board that the army was not "it would start in the southwest Pacific, and evidently nobody had any idea of what was going on."

This belief resulted, the board said, in "the board's decision" being given to the needs of Gen. Douglas MacArthur in the Philippines, with only secondary consideration to Hawaii.

Edmonton, District Men Are Returning

Four officers and 23 other ranks of the Canadian Army from Military District No. 15 have returned to Edmonton after a tour of duty in the Pacific.

Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the U.S. fleet, repeated that Stark as chief of naval operations immediately after Pearl Harbor, said in an endorsement to the navy board's report that:

Rare Dancing Will Be Seen At Folk Meet

Those who attend the folk festival to be held in Victoria Park, Sept. 2 at 2 p.m., will see one of the world's rarest dances. This dance, often performed with out any musical accompaniment, is believed to be derived from one of the oldest English dance forms.

The Kentucky Running Set, which goes back to the pre-Mexican Cortes era, the late Cecil Sharp, probably the world's greatest authority on the English dance, has the dance to have its origin in the Druid rituals performed 2,000 years ago at Stonehenge.

SIMPLE STEP

The step itself is an extremely simple light running step which is done in the accompaniment of hand clapping. This form survived in the British Isles, and was not available to the people.

Even the fiddle which is used by so many people to accompany the dance was not allowed in the region because of a superstition transmitted by ecclesiastics that this instrument was the voice of the devil.

The people, not to be discouraged, carried on their folk tradition of dancing and merriment by the type of accompaniment used by their forefathers in long ages past, and many a dull winter evening was set lively in the fast light rhythm of palm beating against palm as a set of young people did the Running Set for their own enjoyment and pleasure of their elders.

Anyone attending the festival who has the stamina and willingness to try will be given the opportunity to experience this exhilarating form of folk fun.

Social Credit Plans Contest Seats in B.C.

Members of the Social Credit party in British Columbia as far as possible will contest all provincial constituencies in the coming general election. Selton Low, national Social Credit leader, said here Wednesday.

Mr. Low, MP for Peace River, arrived in Edmonton on his way to Ottawa for the House of Commons session which begins next week. He conferred with provincial government officials at the Legislative building.

First Instalment On Business Taxes

First instalment payments of business taxes made on Tuesday totalled $1,854.10 to bring the total of the instalment payments to $39,000 compared with $36,800.66 for the 1944 instalment, an increase of $2,199.44, according to figures released Wednesday by Thomas Walker, city assessor.

TO CONTEST MANITOBA

The Social Credit leader said his party will have many candidates in Manitoba. If a provincial general election is called in that province, Mr. Low will meet Manitoba party workers on his way to Ottawa.

The SC leader, however, promised to hold caucus at Parliament Hill next Wednesday, Mr. Low said. Thirteen members make up the S.C. bloc in the Commons.

Today's Sport Parade

By Jack Cuddy

FRANKFURT-AM-MAIN, Germany, Aug. 29.—(BUP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower had no worries today over morale of American troops in Europe, provided they are supplied with enough athletic equipment.

Given five free hours anywhere, he said, an American soldier is sure to get some kind of a game started. He described the American love of sports as a continuation of the frontier spirit, initiative and the desire to excel, stimulated by sports, have made the Americans excellent soldiers, he added.

Eisenhower met touring American sports writers for an informal talk at his private office in the "European Pavilion," the G. I. Parahenindustrie office buildings where more than 17,000 persons work, including 4,000 officers of the headquarters command.

The sports from Allentown, Kan., has added only one of few appointments to the splendor of the Farber board of directors' room. One was a picture of Generalissimo Josef Stalin, received only yesterday. It was inscribed in Russian: "To a famous strategist, General of the Army, Eisenhower, with the very best wishes, Stalin."

Eisenhower said the army was developing sports in the European theatre and stimulating inter-allied competition in order to provide wholesome recreation for troops and to promote international friendship.

He said the playing field developed so much sport that a boy in the 100-yard dash would try to win the 200-yard dash, a more difficult run.

He said he thought boxing was the greatest sport when properly undertaken, because it developed self confidence and courage, fear of personal injury when men learn that a black eye or bloody nose is as serious as he has imagined.

By next spring, he said, he hoped that the only American servicemen left in Europe would be the army of occupation which may be smaller than the force originally intended to do the job. Replacement, he said, should be available for any man who has served in the war unless he desires to remain in Europe.

TORONTO, Aug. 29.—(CP)—The baseball season, the ball goes over third base on a line and the left fielder stops dead when a home run to the foul line, only to be chased by two husky dogs.

Right fielders scoop Texas leaguers out of goose musky and run ankle-deep in lake water for longer fly balls.

An official sits on the sidelines with a towel, drying off five balls not in play.

A ground rule stipulates two bases for a "water ball"—any hit driven into Yellowknife lake. Impossible! It happens every day in the fabulous mud flat softball league in Yellowknife, N.W.T. (Montreal Standard) O'Brien says it does.

For an uninhibited mud lake fans, who holler harshly at minding outfielders and probably rare for longer fly balls.

A difference of opinion developed, anyway. The left fielder charged interference, claiming he wasn't used to the company of horses and husky dogs. The batter, who circled the bases on the hit, insisted the fielder only thought he was needing interference and should have kept after the ball.

The animals hadn't actually crossed the foul line, he stressed, and therefore didn't constitute a playing base.

Finally the umpire ruled that there was "gratuitous potential risk" and restricted the batter to two bases.

O'Brien, who touched on Yellowknife in a six-week, 10,000-mile journey, says one of the umpires he met in the land of the midnight sun was Dutch Galar, who played for Montreal Mar-

Better Rid of Mate With Clothes Mania

Young Married Couple Does Not Get Along So Well Together Because Wife Spends More Money on Clothes Than They Can Afford

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: We are a young married couple who do not get along so well together because my wife spends more money on clothes than we can afford. When I tell her that we should live within our income and save something for us to live on, she says that she is never to get anywhere, she is first into a rage, then she says that she is so dressed, besides dozens of other garments and innumerable shoes and hats. She takes to me everything she sees other women have. She is never satisfied.

Can you say something that will help us both to settle this matter? WORRIED HUSBAND.

MAN HELPLESS
ANSWER: No man in the world has my sympathy more completely than the one who is married to a woman with the clothes mania, for he is helpless to deal with it. She is deaf to his entreaties and his arguments, and nothing he can say changes her. She loves a new dress or a new hat better than she does him, and she would rather have a pink coat than a home, or for her husband to be able to go into business for himself.

So there is, I am afraid, no cure to do except to let her spend her money and be glad to look forward to a lifetime of grinding labor at the end of which she will have nothing but a lot of rejected bills. I think a man is foolish to put up with such treatment from his wife and that if he will not live within their income that he is perfectly justified in leaving her. Perhaps if you would hold the threat of this over her, you could make her see reason, but I doubt it.

My advice to you is to consult a lawyer and see if there is any way in which you can stop her credit at the stores. Otherwise you are lost.

15 YEARS
DEAR MISS DIX: My son, who is 15, loves a girl of the same age. He is going into the service, and he wants to remain in it after he is discharged. If he marries the girl, it will mean long separation, and he thinks you think would be his chances for an ideal, happy married life. Both have all the qualifications for a good marriage, and there would be no children. What do you think?

Warborn textiles for postwar use. Self-lined wool, cushion-soled socks, shrink-proof sweaters, washable velvets and pleated nylon dresses which won't need pressing are lead-babies which will be just enough for commercial adoption when Uncle Sam gives industry the go-ahead. Intensively nurtured by the needs of the armed forces, these many many fabric developments will be a big surprise to some of today's fabrics as it is to the flying eye cranes of the last war.

Take a woolen, for instance, a self-cleaning one that doesn't need sewing for making clothing warmer. One of these, developed by the Army, is a woolen fabric in high altitudes, is a wartime offshoot of lankie wool. It is the possibility of offers for making streamlined suits for outdoor winter wear.

Cushioned socks? Hailed with "shoes" by the sports-loving crowd is the very good prospect of socks terry-ribbed to the cushion sole as soft as a bath towel under feet that slog along on the golf links or beat up tennis courts.

Antiback treatment of wool socks and blankets for the armed forces promises civilians a long list of non-shrinking woollens. Shrink-proof fabrics that stabilize wool fibers will keep your Argyle plaids from becoming hand-me-downs after they've washed.

Developed for military use and coming up for civilians are finishes to keep textiles safe from fire, water, mildew and stains. Thanks to such finishes, tablecloths can be made stainproof, awnings and other outdoor stuff mildew-proof, clothes water-resistant and ironing board covers burn-proof.

Immediate prospects are hats and bags treated with aridex, a water-repellent which will keep next summer's bonnets and bags safe from smudges and dust.

Ruling of Court

Boy of 12 to Arbitrate Quarrels of His Parents

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Because a 12-year-old boy agreed to arbitrate his parents' quarrels, a Chicago couple was reunited yesterday after the wife had filed suit for divorce.

To a suggestion of the mother's counsel, Samuel M. Starr, that the couple, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Hood, could be reunited, one of their three children, Carroll, Jr., replied: "I don't believe it would be successful. I've observed that my parents are constantly quarrelling. The quarrels lead to fights. I think they should be made to live apart. I'm opposed to a reconciliation."

Minute Make-Ups

"I am surprised at the depth of your observations," the judge said, "and I agree that good and bad luck are to be avoided. The judge was silent for a moment, then asked the boy: 'Are you willing to assume responsibility for your parent living in harmony?'"

"I'll try," the boy answered. "You will be a sort of deputy of the court," the judge said. "You will act as an arbitrator if your parents begin quarrelling again. And you will report back to me here they're getting along." The parents promised to heed their son's efforts to preserve harmony, and the three left the courtroom together.

OFFICER in the Dental Corps of the Army writes:

Every child wants to be a success. He wants to play like a champion, to be a hero, to be a winner. He wants to be a champion, to be a hero, to be a winner. He wants to be a champion, to be a hero, to be a winner.

It isn't the best sportsmanship, but it is a parent to win constantly just because he can. Or course, it is taken for granted that the child will play like a champion, to be a hero, to be a winner. He wants to be a champion, to be a hero, to be a winner.

Naval League Here Still Needs Help

Work room of the Women's Committee of the Northern Alberta Division of the Navy League of Canada will be open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., beginning Monday.

The need for duty bags and wool comforts is as great as ever. The fighting is over but the work of the Merchant Navy goes on as ever and storm and cold to deliver the goods, the food and the clothing so desperately needed in destitute Europe.

A Christmas gift of a well-tailored suit will show Canada's appreciation of invaluable service both in war and peace.

IT'S STILL VACATION TIME IN MOST OF CANADA, BUT FARM CHILDREN OF SASKATCHEWAN ARE STILL AT SCHOOL

Each morning during the hot summer the children of St. Stephen's school, 40 miles west of Regina, hold a flag-raising ceremony. Then they sing the National Anthem.

Horseback is a favorite way for prairie children to travel to and from school. Arriving at St. Stephen's are Harold Hoffman, Elanora Walbaum, and Alice Lenz. It's school for them now but they'll be off in the fall when they'll be needed to help with the harvest.

Trading eats are Ernest Stengel and Irene Ziegler as they eat lunch in the country school. The children don't mind going to school during the hot summer because they consider harvest work with power machinery to be fun.

CANADIAN WAR PLANTS SWITCH TO CIVILIAN PRODUCTION

Fishing reels instead of Bren guns will be made here. Hon. C. D. Howe, minister of reconstruction, says there will be no wholesale shifting of workers to jobs at lower wages.

Remote control units for motorized equipment and mantel radios instead of radar parts is included in the reconversion program of peacetime production.

Just a change of wire sizes converted this machine from winding coils for radar to radio. Mrs. Rita Johnston will work at the same machine in peacetime as she did in war.

Got "Good Results"

Hydrogen Peroxide Used To Power Nazi V-Bombs

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP) Navy Secretary Forrestal disclosed yesterday that hydrogen peroxide, the common bleach and antiseptic, was used by the Germans as a propellant for their V-bombs.

At the time of their surrender, the Germans were in a statement the Nazis were obtaining "practically good results" in harnessing power from the hydrogen peroxide, which is a powerful oxidizing agent and was being used to power their V-bombs.

Mr. Forrestal made the disclosure in reporting on his trip to Europe last month, during which he observed the work of the navy technical mission. He said other German technical developments, which included the use of hydrogen peroxide, were being used because of the surrender.

CNR President Reviews Line's Service in War

MONTREAL, Aug. 29.—(AP) A message addressed to the Canadian public by R. C. Vaughan, chairman and president of the Canadian National Railways, today expressed the system's thanks for the co-operation given it during the war by the millions of train and steamship passengers, shippers of freight and express, hotel guests, and patrons of the telegraph and other services.

"The Canadian National ability to fulfill its gigantic war duty was the credit and satisfaction of the nation," he said. "It did not only in the skill, devotion and zeal of those who are our workers, but in large measure also in the Canadian public who, by their generous response to appeals for help and their uncomplicated acceptance of restrictions and controls, lightened our burden."

PARTICULAR MENTION

He made particular mention of "the unnumbered citizens who remained from travelling steadily as they contributed to the common cause."

From the outbreak of the war in September, 1939, to V-J Day, Canadian National passenger train miles amounted to more than 128 million, according to the bureau of statistics. Passenger car miles totaled more than 40 million and freight car miles more than 12 million. It is estimated that more than 325 million passengers were carried.

Up to the end of last year, more than four million troops had been transported in 4,500 train miles. The movement of troops returning home from overseas is still continuing and figures are not yet available concerning its size, but two-thirds of all troop trains required for these movements are being provided by the Canadian National.

Special war-time trains operated to and from war plants, carried over 4 million passengers. Nearly 20 million meals were served to military and civilian passengers on Canadian National dining cars during the war period.

BIG FREIGHT LOAD

The Canadian National loaded more than 40 million tons of freight during the war. Freight train miles aggregated more than 246 million freight car miles, nearly 11 billion net ton miles, more than 36 million.

Vessels owned and operated by the Canadian National Steamships travelled four and a half million miles in war service and a number were victims of enemy action. Three were captured into enemy hands, and one, the "Lady Nelson," was Canada's first hospital ship.

Hotels, express and telegraph departments all contributed largely to the nation's war effort. Trans-Canada Air Lines aircraft flew some 45 million miles, carrying more than 60,000 passengers, approximately 14 million pounds of mail and two and a half million pounds of express.

The railways' drydock and shipyard at Prince Rupert built ship-repairers and freighters. National Railways Maritime Limited at Montreal constructed naval gunboats and other war equipment. Officers and staffs in the Canadian National's architecture department, the real estate law and development departments and

Doctor Finds Human Bite Worse Than That of Dog

By FRANK CARLEY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—(AP)—When a man bites a dog it's not only news but the dog would get a rougher deal than would a man under reversed circumstances.

Such a conclusion seems indicated from a report yesterday by a navy doctor. He said that when a human bites another human the result can be far nastier than when human takes a chew out of a dog's leg.

"The human bite," declared Lt. Comdr. M. G. Henry of the naval medical corps, "is potentially one hundred per cent infected and serious, while dog bites are with the single exception of rabies—practically always clean as a brandy snuff and the

War Brides Learn About Future Home

OTTAWA, Aug. 29.—(CP)—Canadian war brides, sitting out for Edinburgh a long wait for transportation, are studying their adopted land, an RCMP release said last night. There are 130 war brides in the Addicks club-named after the famous Scottish castle.

They can tell you Canada's education system is an effective instrument of democracy; why Canadian hospitals are models for the world; and the grain and corn of farm life in the Dominion. You can't feel them on their independent allowances—questions or answers.

While shipping at a premium, it is likely that the girls will be waiting long enough in Edinburgh to complete a couple of short courses in Canadian history but at least some of them won't have to worry too soon about that quality old custom of their former husbands—getting up five in the morning.

Vice-president of the International Harvester Co. said yesterday. He said that continuing labor shortage is preventing full production.

Production Delayed

OTTAWA, Aug. 29.—(CP)—The demand for farm machinery probably will not be met completely and UIC F. N. Morin, senior
